TRAFFIC WARDENS?

TRAFFIC problems are I taking up an increasing amount of Police time in Hongkong, time , which , could be spent in maintaining law and order in more unruly areas than the ronds: for example, tackling the Triad menace and dope gangs, corruption and gangsters, and the growing army of petty thieves.

We could turn our trained policemen to this work if we organised full-time "Traffic Wardens" to take their places. The establishment of such a force is now being discussed in Britain. The Wardens would remain under the Traffic Department and their able and conscientious. team of administrators.

A School Too

IDUT the virtue of the idea | is that in addition to freeing policemen for more important duties, the Traffic Wardens would require a its own training school, who was leg-before for 43. general police work.

city areas. Many countries ton arrow. now have special parking! police and the problem in ___ Hongkong has reached the stage where it requires more concentration than the man on the beat can afford to give it.

The local police force is not large by world standards, but our problems are growing with our increasing population and the prevalent economic Cifficulties. And as traffic is also going to take up more and more time and effort with the intensifying congestion on the roads, the idea of setting up a special force is one we should consider.

The former director of one of Paris' smartest restauformally WILS charged today in connection with France's "rose ballet" teen-nge sex scandal.

Ho is Georges Biancheri, middle-aged ex-director of the Pavilion d'Armenonville, an exclusive eating place beside a lake in the famed Bois de Boulogne.

Until recently, he was also the manager of the plush Queenie Cafe in Paris.

Like four other prominent, Parisians implicated carlier, Blancheri was charged before an examining magistrate with offences against public morality in connection with the case.

A dozen girls aged between 14 and 18 involved in scandal have told authorities the rose ballets were orgies at which they danced nude before influential patrons at villas on the edge of Paris.

One girl told newsmen today that other such parties were held in the swank Parls apartment of a countess on the rightbank Franklin Boulevard.

NOW when it comes round to New Year and the Monarch's Birthday, there is a considerable flutter in the Civil Service dovecot, also in such circles which contain citizens prominent in public life.

The ages vio not alter human nature, and I wish to tell the story of the occasion which followed the circumstances of my last instalment which told of the soldiers being awarded plates, cups, and memorial tablets as a reward for helping to stamp out the plague of 1894.

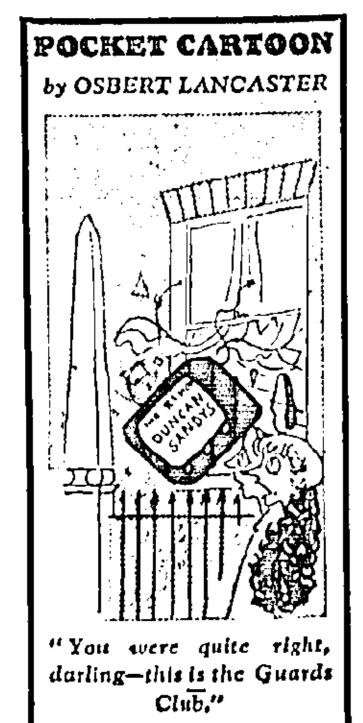

I wish now to tell the sad story of one John J. Francis, Q.C., sometime leader of the Bar in Hongkong, and Chairman of the Sanitary Board of Hongkong during the terrible plague of 1894.

By the direction of the Marquess of Ripon, I have great pleasure in forwarding to you the accompanying inkstand.

. You will find engraved upon it the following in-. scription: "Presented by the Hongkong Government, with the approval of Her Majesty's Government, to J. J. Francis, Esq., Q.C., Chairman of the Permanent Committee of the Sanitary Board, in recognition of services rendered during the epidemic of Bubonic Plague in Hongkong in 1894,"

For those services, you have been already thanked by me, and also by the Secretary of State for the Colonies. In again expressing my appreciation of your work, which you then performed so willingly and so ably, it only remains for me now to ask you to accept this inkstand from the Government of Hongkong as a slight recognition of your disinterested and valuable labours during the epidemie of 1894.

Now there is nothing wrong with that letter; it is couched in polite terms. It is a trifle formal, as becomes Governors of Colonies; it is not very matey, but then at the same time it is the kind of letter you keep and mention casually to people after dinner. As a matter of fact. one can imagine John J. pulling out this letter after dinner, and saying easually; "Did I ever show you the letter H.E. wrote

The answer is that he could have made the hand two different ways. The first way, would be to cash the king of diamonds before starting trumps. This would risk a first round ruff, but would have been the best play.

The second way would be to plny, dummy's ace of diamonds; not a low diamond when he started that suit. Then he could play the jack of dismonds and let it ride. This play would work because East held three diamonds to the queen, but he would have looked mighty silly If West had shown up with queen and one diamond.

Ed Murrow has been making the American public and authorities sit up and take notice for 20 years. And with every year the extent of his influence grows.

In the early days of World War II, his excellent broadcasts from London had hamea-unable influence on American public opinion. In 1954, he became a inctional hero overnight for his r in atjoined indictment of Senator McCarthy and his methods,

There is something about a fireworks display which sets the cash customers stamping to get through the turnstiles.

Last Friday night one of the biggest crowds in Sydney's history—even bigger than any one night of the Queen's visit in 1953—broke every traffle rule in the book and jam-packed every street to take up vantage points to see the Harbour fireworks display that coincided with the opening of the Japanese Trade

Fair. Every available policeman was called on duty to deal with a crowd estimated at more than 750,000 and practically every car in the metropolitan area chugged its way to add to the

It took more than five hours to clear the city after the last bunger went off and police had to make appeals to private motorists to tow away vehicles that had broken down through overheated engines, vapour locks in petrol pipes, slipping clutches and all the other ills that befall motor vehicles when they are forced to idle and crawl in low gear for long periods.

The fireworks themselves; unfortunately a bit of a damp squib, by no means lived up to their reputation. The Trade Fair itself, however, is a different kettle of fish. On display are some of the most outstanding ware—textiles, toys, electrical, optical-that has been our pleasure to see. Local manufacturers have viewed the Fair with dismay. They say that the quality and the prices offered by the Japanese cannot in any way be met by Australian competition.
